

GRADUATE TEACHING ASSISTANT (GTA) POSTGRADUATE RESEARCH

Annually, the University of Bristol Law School advertises and recruits a Graduate Teaching Assistant as a scholarship for a PhD student. The job description (role), award details, criteria and selection process are detailed below. This is a highly competitive scholarship with a rigorous recruitment process and monitoring of satisfactory research progress and teaching performance indicators.

1. Role

A GTA scholarship requires the Postgraduate Research (PGR) student to teach Undergraduate students, as well as carry out research. The University of Bristol policy on PGRs who Teach<sup>1</sup> makes it clear that teaching is optional for most PGRs, therefore the Law School takes care to ensure that anybody appointed as a GTA is capable of teaching and has sufficient time to do the job properly. The GTA will have a teaching contract, making it very clear what is expected from their teaching role, and puts in place the framework to allow them to deliver on both teaching and research.

2. Hours

The GTA scholarship award will be for 4 years for new incoming students, or until first submission of the PhD thesis if this is earlier. During the first 3.5 years the GTA Scholar will be registered as a full-time student carrying out research as a PhD student and is expected to spend time supporting undergraduate teaching, typically in of small groups and under the direction of the member of academic staff responsible for the taught unit. Assuming that a GTA scholar will work ~ 47 weeks per year, the teaching time will be ~250 hours per year, or ~875 hours over the 3.5 year contract. The final 6 months will be free of teaching, to enable the GTA to focus on completing their PhD. The teaching hours must include reasonable allowance for all teaching activities – preparation, marking, communication with students, meetings, training, outreach – and schools will periodically monitor the workload and ensure that it remains in keeping with the contracted hours.

Tier 4 visa-holders should be aware of the working conditions attached to their visa. Hours spent on teaching activities (as listed above) will contribute to the weekly limit stated on their student visa (Usually 20 hours per week). For more information, see <http://www.bristol.ac.uk/directory/visas/work-visas/>

3. Awards

We have two GTA studentships available; one covering research degree tuition fees at the Home rate, and one at the Overseas rate. Both studentships will further include a PhD research stipend, research travel support grant (RTSG) and payment for part-time teaching. For 2024/25, the tuition fee and stipend is split as follows:

6. Support and Mentoring

Training and support for teaching will be provided in line with the University's policy on 'PGRs who Teach'<sup>3</sup>. Each GTA Scholar must have a named Teaching Mentor, who cannot be one of their supervisors, and who may require the GTA to undertake further training above the University minimum as appropriate for local teaching needs. The school should set out a mentoring scheme appropriate to their discipline and the particular activities the Scholar is likely to be asked to do. This needs to be structured with clear and specific demands placed on the Mentor and the Scholar, so both know what is expected of them. This is important both for the professional development of the GTA and for the students they teach.

A single member of staff must be identified as the Senior Mentor, who will be responsible for overseeing the mentoring scheme for all GTAs within the school. This could be, for example, the Postgraduate Director or the Undergraduate Director, but could also be another member of staff (e.g. Education Director). The Bristol Doctoral College will provide the institutional strategy and guidance for enhancing the experience for all GTA Scholars and relevant stakeholders.

7. Dealing with Unsatisfactory Performance of teaching duties by a GTA Scholar

The Scholar's performance will be monitored carefully in both research and teaching. The appropriate guidance, support and training the Scholar receives will enable them to improve as a teacher. This may also involve adjusting the teaching activities to suit the Scholar's personal strengths (e.g. subject knowledge etc.). If it is found that the Scholar's teaching does not reach a minimum acceptable standard, despite appropriate guidance, support and training, then the Scholar will be withdrawn from teaching activities and the Scholarship reviewed. This may only be done in consultation with the Head of School and the Postgraduate Director.

All GTA Scholars, as PhD students, will be reviewed annually to ensure that they are making satisfactory academic progress, and this academic review will be entirely separate from the assessment of their performance as teaching assistants. In terms of PhD progression, requests from GTAs for extension or suspension of study on the basis of their teaching load will not be permitted. If a Scholar is not making satisfactory academic progress according to University Regulations<sup>4</sup>, then the Scholarship will be reviewed.
